Glory! Totally Glory! Well, let's see... so first, I'd go get orange tulle from Hobby Lobby. And, green lacy ribbon. Then I'd get a blue-green t-shirt, the color of Glory's main scales on the cover of The Hidden Kingdom, and paint the circles and dots and all the pretty Glory scales colors on the shirt. I'd put the lace around the sleeves, and then from there, put orange tulle to sort of drape off the sleeve in an angel wing sleeve kind of thng. After that, I'd get an orange maxi skirt. Oh, and I'd spray-paint the light-green on the shirt, if I could. Anyways, I would then use tulle and cardboard (and spraypaint) for the wings, and make some type of harness they went on. And I'd use duct tape for the rainbow-ish scales on her wings, and the tulle for the softer wing skin. Then finally, I'd get one of those plastic mask bases from Hobby Lobby, and paint it blue with darker blue shadings to define the scales. Then I'd take the cheap chopsticks from Panda Express, break them in half, and lace the tulle around them, for the ruff behind Glory's ears. Oh, and I'd paint the blue spines on that too, then glue that to the mask. Then I'd make the ears by folding some blue felt. Then I'd paint the yellow spots on the mask, under the eyes. Then blue-green gloves. And a cheap flower crown from any store (Which I already have.). And, to top it all off, a plush gray sloth around my neck. You know what, I have halloween sorted out for next year. (This costume is based off Glory on the cover of The Hidden Kingdom.)
